

INTEGRITY NOW RELEASES DOWNTOWN SURREY CULTURAL CENTRE PLAN

For Immediate Release
September 26, 2018

Surrey, BC: In advance of the highly anticipated Downtown Surrey Business Improvement Association (DSBIA) mayoralty candidate Town Hall event this evening, Integrity Now, the new political organization in Surrey headed by mayoralty candidate Bruce Hayne reaffirmed their commitment for developing a performance and cultural centre in the downtown core.

“Over my time as a city of Surrey Councillor I’ve advocated for a cultural and music venue in the downtown core, and if our team is elected we are committed to establishing a multifaceted facility that will draw creatives from across the province and beyond to a spectacular facility dedicated to art, culture and music,” says Hayne.

Integrity Now believes that a performing arts centre is a much needed asset for residents of all ages and abilities, a venue that showcases world-class talent and creates positive economic impact throughout the city, as well as a facility that embraces and provides a showcase for local talent.

“Music and the arts brings people together regardless of age, ethnicity, language or economic position,” says Hayne. “I see this facility being both a huge financial benefit to this neighbourhood and throughout the city as well as a place where our residents can gather and learn, experience and celebrate.”
